

Croydon woman rescued after search

CROYDON — A local woman was hospitalized early Sunday morning after searchers spent much of the night searching for her.

Lisa Scanlon, 52, was found by search teams at about 2 a.m. in a wooded area near Fletcher Road.

According to Fish and Game Lt. Todd Bogardus, Scanlon had parked her car on the road, intending to take a walk on an old farm where she had lived as a child. During her walk, she became disoriented and lost her way, he said.

The search for her was launched at about 6:30 p.m. More than six hours later, a New England K-9 team found Scanlon in a wooded area. She was taken to Dartmouth Hitchcock Hospital to be evaluated," Bogardus said.